

Rarely in life do you receive a gift and not know the giver—or even that the gift occurred. But that is what happens for every patient and family here at (organization name). Your care experience is possible in part because of the generosity of people like you, most of whom you will never meet.

We do not create excellence alone, but through the partnership of thousands of individuals who give in different ways. Some work here. Others live in the community. A few reside in different states or countries. But all share our purpose of creating an extraordinary patient experience for you.

Our organization began with an act of generosity. (sample story) When John and Florence Campbell lost their first-born child to typhoid fever in 1921, they resolved to turn their own loss into abundance for others. Although nothing would bring back their son, something could prevent other parents from losing someone they love. So they decided to donate their 18-room home to create a hospital. Since that time many others built upon this gift to make possible the technologies, life-saving and life-enhancing services that exist today.

Generosity sustains us at (organization name). We are not for profit both in organizational form and in spirit as we dedicate ourselves to the great purpose of healing and enriching life in our community.
