YOU MADE IT POSSIBLE

“We all have perceptions of hospice and what hospice means. I used to think it was care for the critically ill in the final days of life. What I found out is that actually hospice is a broad range of services not intended for the last second, but to make people’s life better all the time.”

MIKE MORTELL

Palliative medicine helps patients define what is important and be in control. It includes things such as pain/symptom management, counseling, and alternative therapies. And this can begin before hospice care—even in concert with curative treatment. But there is little reimbursement. Palliative medicine exists because of generosity.

You gave a gift to someone needing palliative care.

You made their life better.
