How beautiful it is, how healing and powerful it is to

RECEIVE

RECEIVE

To receive is as powerful as to give.

RECEIVE IN GRATITUDE

If we were all-sufficient, we would in our completeness make everyone else meaningless. There would be no way to contribute, no way to make a difference. By receiving, we enable others to give, to have purpose.

OPEN TO POSSIBILITY

Life inevitably brings us to places of utter vulnerability.

Here we can't be what we've always been, we can't do what we've always done.

We enter the void of unknowing, becoming formless.

Letting go.

And, perhaps, finding new insights and abilities.

We emerge transformed—more than we were before the difficulty.

IMMERSE INTO ABUNDANCE

There is abundance that goes beyond what we possess, what we own or can do alone.

This is the abundance of all that is, the great plentitude.

In times of weakness or limitation, we connect to that which is larger, that which surrounds us—alive and infinite.

We are bonded in the great chain of being as much by our receiving as our giving.

A central illustration shows two dark, textured human silhouettes standing on a dark, textured ground. They are facing each other, with their arms extended to hold a glowing white orb. From the top of the orb, a small, vibrant green tree with a thin trunk and a rounded canopy grows upwards. The background is a soft, ethereal blue and white mist or smoke, with a few small white stars or specks scattered throughout. The overall mood is one of hope, connection, and growth.
