Learn Together

A second grade teacher at a local elementary school received breast cancer treatment here. Her students wanted to help so they raised money through school fundraisers. They also made books of hope, courage, and jokes for cancer patients to enjoy while receiving treatment.

Create Memories

A Colleague here remembered how much the memory quilt she received after her father passed away meant to her. So she started a program here enabling grieving families to have memory quilts made from their loved ones' clothes and other belongings to remember them for years to come.

Do More

Two members of the community were recognized as heroes after trying to save the life of a boy who was badly burned. When awarded a monetary gift, they donated it to the Goshen Center for Cancer Care's Patient Assistance Fund in memory of their grandmother who had cancer. Now, their heroic act of generosity will touch even more lives.

Go Beyond

Grateful for the care she received, a patient and her husband envisioned solutions to a few routine challenges here,
and then donated funds to implement them.
Their generous gifts will continue to benefit patients, visitors, and Colleagues alike on a daily basis for years to come.

Celebrate Life

Fulfilling a promise he made to his own children, a surgical services nurse here personally delivers a gift to every newborn he helps bring into the world. Often it's the first gift the baby receives.

Pass it On

Over 300 volunteers give of their time and talents here donating more than 50,000 hours annually—the equivalent of 25 full time positions. Many of them are retired physicians, nurses, and businessmen and women. Hospitality is their gift, compassion their motivation.

Be a Hero

An oncology nurse here shaved his head in honor of his niece who was diagnosed with cancer at age 2, after learning of an organization that encourages adults to shave their heads to become heroes to children fighting cancer. By doing so, he raised funds in support of cancer research.

His niece, now 7, is cancer free.
